

AUGUSTINER

at the Krämerbrücke (merchants' bridge)

Menu

The "Augustiner an der Krämerbrücke" is a modern dining experience which is consciously committed to its historical and regional roots. A look into our menu is also a look into the growth of our historical eating and drinking culture. It's cultivation is a matter close to our heart: The Thuringian hospitality in combination with our traditional art of brewing the beloved Augustinian beer is a one of a kind experience.

Your Augustiner host,
Uwe Machnik

Erfurt and Agriculture

Because of the good climate conditions, the great geographical location and the fertile soil surrounding the city, there was an early blossoming of agriculture and horticulture. Christian Reichart is regarded as the founder of the Erfurt horticulture. Amongst other things he introduced cauliflower to this region, which is probably Erfurt's best known specialty.

Later the cultivation of flowers and seeds became very meaningful to the people, therefore Erfurt is also called the city of flowers.

Sitting in the Augustiner beer garden, you don't only sit at the river Gera – the historic lifeline of the city – but also have a view of many of the sights.
